ABOUT ADVOCACY AND SUPPORT

You can nominate a representative or support person of your choice — a parent, elder, relative or legal representative — to support you in your contact with . A support person may help with communication, ensure information is understood, attend to your personal support needs, be a point of contact, and ensure your best interests are represented. You can also ask  to advocate on your behalf or to help you access an independent advocacy service — for example where there is a conflict of interest.  will not discuss personal matters without your consent or while you are not present.
