-----------------------	-------------------------	---------------------------	---------------------	---------------------------

This is a short guide for anyone who wants to give feedback, raise a concern or make a complaint about [REDACTED] or its services. Read it together with the Feedback and Complaints Policy. Complaints are important — they help us understand what matters to you and improve our services.

Who can make a complaint

Any client, and their family, carers, representatives and advocates, as well as statutory bodies, government agencies, stakeholders, workers or any other person, may make a complaint to or about [REDACTED], its supports, services, practitioners, employees, contractors, volunteers and other workers.

You can complain anonymously — call [REDACTED] and say you wish to make an anonymous complaint, or complete a Feedback and Complaints Form without your name or other identifying details and post it to [REDACTED].

Your right to an advocate

You may seek support from a family member, friend or independent advocate in making a complaint. If you would like an advocate or representative involved, let us know and [REDACTED] will help arrange it.

A safe environment

You should feel confident to make a complaint or give negative feedback without fear of adverse consequences, retribution or loss of service — whether you complain to [REDACTED] or to the NDIS Commission.
