PURPOSE AT A GLANCE

This policy sets out how [REDACTED] recruits, inducts, trains, supervises and manages the performance of its workers so that every participant's support is delivered by competent, qualified people — and how support continues without interruption when a worker is absent or a role is vacant.

1. Purpose and scope

This policy supports [REDACTED] to apply the Human Resources Management and Continuity of Support NDIS Practice Standards. It applies to all services and supports delivered by [REDACTED] and to all employees, contractors and volunteers (Workers), who must take full responsibility for understanding and following it. It should be read alongside the related documents in the final section and the corresponding procedures in the Policy Register.

2. Policy aims

[REDACTED] is committed to ensuring that:

- each participant's support needs are met by workers who are competent in their role, hold relevant qualifications and have relevant expertise and experience to provide person-centred support; and
- each participant has access to timely and appropriate support without interruption.

3. General

[REDACTED] maintains a human resource management system that complies with relevant State and Commonwealth employment legislation. Workers are valued and recognised for their contribution.

[REDACTED] provides an equitable, safe and encouraging workplace, and unacceptable conduct (as defined in the Work Health and Safety Policy) is not tolerated.

4. Recruitment and selection

All key worker positions have a position description covering the position's primary functions, responsibilities and performance indicators, essential and desirable skills, knowledge, qualifications and experience, and scope and limitations.

For every person in a Risk Assessed Role, [REDACTED] verifies — before the engagement starts — 100 points of ID, an NDIS Worker Screening Check clearance, proof of any mandatory vaccinations, completion of the NDIS Worker Orientation Module and COVID-19 infection-control training.

All workers complete a Pre-Employment Collection Form so that secondary employment, screening checks and reference checks can be confirmed. [REDACTED] keeps a secure personnel file for each worker covering recruitment, position description, pre-employment checks, the employment contract, pay, performance, and training and development.

5. Induction and orientation

Each new worker completes an induction and orientation process, including the mandatory NDIS Worker Orientation Module and COVID-19 infection-control training, to become familiar with [REDACTED]'s purpose, operations and the requirements of their position. Flexible, supportive working conditions are provided in line with applicable legislation and comparable to industry standards.

6. Training and development

[REDACTED] maintains a system to identify, plan, facilitate, record and evaluate the effectiveness of training for workers, including mandatory training and training on worker obligations under the NDIS Practice Standards and Rules. Workers and [REDACTED] collaborate to build a continuous professional development culture: it is the worker's and the Principal's shared responsibility to seek learning opportunities, and the Principal's responsibility to coach workers and identify development needs.

Supervision, support and resources are available relative to the scope and complexity of supports delivered. All workers are closely supervised when starting a new position. Every worker has an annual performance review — formally managed, developed and documented, with formal feedback and development opportunities — and informal feedback throughout the year.

7. Taking leave

Workers are entitled to leave in accordance with applicable law, are encouraged to take leave regularly rather than accrue large balances, and leave requests are managed to preserve continuity of service for clients.

8. Continuity of supports

[REDACTED] manages planned and unplanned absences in a structured way to avoid disruption. In the event of a worker absence or vacancy, a suitably qualified or experienced person performs the role in accordance with the Business Continuity and Disaster Management Plan.

Support is planned with each participant to meet their specific needs and preferences, which are documented and provided to workers before they start working with that participant. Arrangements are in place to provide support without interruption throughout the service agreement; where changes or interruptions are unavoidable, alternative arrangements are explained and agreed with the participant and delivered in a way appropriate to their needs, preferences and goals.

9. Managing unsatisfactory performance

Where a worker's performance does not meet a satisfactory standard, the first step is informal counselling: [REDACTED] provides details of the concern and an opportunity to improve within a set timeframe, with a Staff Performance Improvement Plan for any agreed actions, and any support needed to assist the worker. Formal processes follow only if the concern is not resolved.
