WELCOME TO []

We are excited to be working with you and to help you meet your needs and achieve your goals. This booklet tells you about us and the services and supports we provide. If you have any questions, just ask — call us on [] or email []. A shorter plain-language version, the Client Information Booklet (Easy Read), is also available.

1. Communicating with you

We want to communicate with you in a way you understand. We use plain language, some of our staff speak other languages, and we can arrange bilingual staff or a qualified interpreter and support you to involve an advocate — for important meetings such as support planning, we strongly recommend an interpreter if we do not speak your language.

2. Our services

[] provides high-quality services and supports which may include: standard in-home and community supports; accommodation and tenancy assistance; support coordination; assistance with daily personal activities; assistance with travel and transport; innovative community participation; development of daily living and life skills; household tasks; participation in community, social and civic activities; supported independent living and shared living supports; group and centre-based activities; assistance to access and maintain employment or further education; specialist behaviour support; and therapeutic supports. The specific supports we can provide to you are agreed with you and set out in your Services Agreement and Services Schedule.

3. How we work together

To understand how we can help, we ask you questions — some in the Client Intake Form. If we think we can help, we arrange a time to meet and may discuss a Services Agreement. After the meeting we check your information, and if we can help we complete and sign a Services Agreement for you to review and sign. Once we both sign, an agreement is formed. We then complete an assessment with you — you are fully involved and can include an advocate, family and anyone you choose — and develop a Client Support Plan that you sign to show you agree. Your plan is reviewed regularly.

4. Your rights

You have the right to: respect for your human worth and dignity; services and supports that are safe, ethical and free from discrimination and from financial, sexual, physical or emotional abuse, neglect and exploitation; freedom of expression, self-determination and decision-making; realising your potential; full participation in society according to your individual and cultural needs and preferences; autonomy, including your right to intimacy and sexual expression; information and support to understand and exercise your legal and human rights; privacy of your personal and sensitive information; and to raise concerns and be supported to make a complaint.

5. Your choice and control

We talk with you (and your family and carers where appropriate) so that you make the decisions about your services and supports. We give you enough time to consider your options and seek advice, and we support you to build your capacity to make choices — but the choices are yours. Where a choice involves risk, we support you to understand the risks and how they can be managed so you can live the way you choose.

6. Conflicts of interest

If we are permitted to provide you with support coordination as well as other supports, a conflict of interest may arise. You will always be told about alternative providers. Where we conduct support coordination, we endeavour to always provide at least three quotes (where possible) from other providers alongside our own. It is your decision whether to choose [] or another provider, and choosing another provider will not affect any of your other services.

7. Matching you with the right staff

We try to match the right staff member to your needs and goals, considering personality, language, culture and skills. We encourage you to be involved and can support you to use an advocate of your choice.

8. Our staff

We employ qualified and experienced staff. All staff complete the NDIS Worker Orientation Module and COVID-19 infection-control training, hold the required screening checks, and wear photo identification.

9. Fees and payments

We charge for the services we provide, following the NDIS Pricing Arrangements. Depending on how your plan is managed, we invoice you, your plan nominee or plan manager, or claim from the NDIA. Expenses not funded under your plan are your responsibility. Our cancellation policy is set out in your Services Agreement.

10. Privacy

We respect your privacy and use your information in line with privacy laws and our Privacy and Dignity Policy. You make decisions about your information by completing a Privacy Consent Form. You can ask us for a copy of any of our policies.

11. Feedback and complaints

Please tell us if something is not right — feedback and complaints help us improve. You can raise a concern with any worker or the Principal, by email to [], by post to [], or by phone on [], and you can complain anonymously. You can also contact the NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission at any time on 1800 035 544 (TTY 133 677) or at ndiscommission.gov.au/about/complaints. You have the right to use an advocate at any time.

12. Incidents

If something goes wrong, we manage it under our Incident Management and Reporting Policy, we tell you what happened and what we are doing, and we consult you about the resolution. Serious ("reportable") incidents are also reported to the NDIS Commission.

13. Leaving our service

You can leave our services at any time, in accordance with your Services Agreement. We will support you to find other services if you would like, and we will work with you on a planned transition using the Exit and Transition Form.
